OCA/USPS-95. Please refer to the response to interrogatory OCA/USPS-10. It appears from the answer that the Postal Service requires that OCA be more specific in formulating its question. Consequently, OCA restates its question as follows:

Is there a term in common use by postal employees and management to refer to mail that has been entered into the postal system but which will never be delivered to the recipient (nor returned to the mailer)? Please explain. In the explanation, please distinguish between undeliverable as addressed (UAA) mail that has not been properly addressed and mail that is properly addressed. Are the terms “missing mail,” “lost mail,” or “undelivered mail” commonly used to refer to such mail?
