Docket No. R2013-11

NOTICE OF THE UNITED STATES POSTAL SERVICE OF FILING BIWEEKLY SURCHARGE REVENUE REPORT
(March 14, 2016)

In accordance with Order No. 3030, issued on January 15, 2016,¹ and Order No. 3103, issued on February 26, 2016,² the Postal Service hereby submits its fourth biweekly estimate of the incremental and cumulative surcharge revenue collected (“Biweekly Report”). As shown in the attached spreadsheet,³ the Postal Service estimates that it has collected $4.513 billion in cumulative surcharge revenue since implementation of the exigent surcharge, as of March 13, 2016, amounting to an increase of $422.4 million since the close of Quarter 1 Fiscal Year (“FY”) 2016.⁴

The Postal Service used the methodology described in its second Biweekly Report to estimate the revenue collected from the exigent surcharge between the end of ² Order No. 3103, Notice and Order on Removal of Exigent Surcharge, PRC Docket No. R2013-11 (Feb. 26, 2016), at 3 (“Pursuant to Order No. 3030, the Postal Service is to continue filing bi-weekly estimates of the incremental and cumulative surcharge revenue.”).

Quarter 1 FY 2016 and March 13, 2016.⁵ In addition, for March 1 through March 13, based on past mailer behavior before and after two recent price changes (the implementation of the exigent surcharge on January 26, 2014,⁶ and the Docket No. R2015-4 price change implemented on May 31, 2015⁷), the Postal Service adjusted the estimated revenue collected from Standard Mail, compared to the daily revenue figures that otherwise were expected based on the second Biweekly Report methodology.⁸

See also Notice of the United States Postal Service of Filing Biweekly Surcharge Revenue Report, PRC Docket No. R2013-11 (Feb. 29, 2016), at 1–2 (relying on the same methodology).

⁸ This follows the approach presented in its notice of removal of the exigent surcharge. In that notice, the Postal Service made clear that in order to estimate the day that it would reach the exigent surcharge revenue limitation, it adjusted revenue collection figures based on past mailer behavior.
