Postal Regulatory Commission/United States Postal Service
Informational Sessions

Washington, DC – Representatives of the Postal Regulatory Commission and the United States Postal Service met on June 24th and again on August 20th to share information of interest concerning the operations of both organizations.

The sessions are limited to the sharing of information for the purpose of familiarizing each entity with the operations of the other organization. This may include reporting on the status of major initiatives within each organization. Pending (or anticipated) postal matters before the Commission are not discussed, nor do deliberations or decisional discussions take place, during these sessions.

The Postal Regulatory Commission is an independent federal agency that provides regulatory oversight over the U.S. Postal Service to ensure the transparency and accountability of the Postal Service and foster a vital and efficient universal mail system. The Commission is comprised of five Presidentially-appointed and Senate-confirmed Commissioners, each serving terms of six years. The Chairman is designated by the President. In addition to Chairman Goldway, the other Commissioners are Vice Chairman Mark Acton and Robert Taub.
